

The Portal

Peter was out exploring in the forest when he stumbled upon a magical portal. It shimmered with beautiful colors, and Peter couldn't help but feel curious. But he also felt a little scared. Should he jump into the portal and see where it led, or should he turn around and go back home to safety?

Sweat ran down Peter's forehead as he thought about what to do. The sun was setting, casting long shadows all around him. With a shaky breath, Peter clenched his fist and walked forward. He closed his eyes and leaped into the portal.

Peter found himself in a strange world. He felt worried and thought about turning back, but the portal had disappeared.

Then, all of a sudden, a quiet voice came from the shadows, "we've been expecting you, Peter."

